Saxonwold at a glance

SAXONWOLD Originally known as Sachsenwald and developed in 1891 as a timber plantation providing gum poles for the mines, Saxonwold (after having its name Anglicised after the outbreak of the first World War) is today, one of the most sought after residential suburbs in Johannesburg. Wide, Jacaranda lined streets with elegant, contemporary houses as well as a few of the original spacious double storey mansions of yesteryear, demonstrate a versatile and vibrant community. Those looking for security complexes and stylish apartments are equally well served in this area. Located just north of major Johannesburg landmarks - The Zoo <http://www.jhbzoo.org.za>, Zoo lake <http://www.jhbcityparks.com/index.php/list-of-parks-mainmenu-39/53-zoo-lake> and the South African National...
